

CRUELITIES OF WAR CONTINUING

Germans Are Beating Back French, English and Belgians

Russians with 3,000,000 Invading German and Austrian Territory

During the week the German invasion of Belgium and France does not seem to be checked by the English, French and Belgian armies combined. The German forces have forced evacuation of Brussels, Namur and many small towns around and have driven the allies, French and English, out of Alsace and Lorraine. The Germans seem to have a straight line for Paris if no greater obstruction is thrown in their way more than the present forces allied against them. Much excitement is manifested in Paris and London and the whole British government is mobilizing its forces as well as the French forces coming forward to stop the advance of the German army. The fate of France is with its capital hangs in a balance. Canada is making all possible speed toward sending an army of volunteers, 30,000 in number, to the aid of France and England. Sharp target practice is in evidence all the time in preparation of efficiency which seems to be absolutely necessary to combat the Germans.

The German government seem to have the most efficient dirigibles for dropping bombs from midair and blowing up whole cities, innocent men, women and children who have no part in the war except by heritage and chance. This seems atrocious and barbarous but no concern is shown and if any restitution is to be made it will be made long after the war is closed and after these innocent lives are gone. The airship which bombarded Antwerp worked at night and is reported to have demolished 60 houses completely and slightly damaged 900. The airship is reported as sailing over the city in 20 minutes and drifted mostly with the wind in order to avoid the noise occasioned by using the propeller.

To the east of Germany, on the Russian border, the Russian army, 3,000,000 strong, is making rapid headway into the German and Austrian territory. The Czar of Russia is at the head of the army in person and is directing the immense army with such skill and force that the Austrians and Germans do not seem to be able to offer much resistance.

With Russia and Germany both forging west, it is hard to make up your mind how things are going to turn. It may mean the downfall of Germany or France and it may influence English dominance also. One thing sure, it is demonstrating that the German government has a well disciplined army and one which has studied war in all its details. The greatest English hope is to hold Germany in check long enough to starve her out by cutting off her supplies by sea which England can easily do provided the land forces are strong enough to check any invasion, which has not to date been demonstrated. British, French, Russian and Japanese warships have blocked the port of Tsing-Tau, a German possession, and the Japanese squadrons proceeded to bombard the port. This port will likely fall under Japanese control for the present. It is reported that the Austrians are going to abandon invasion of Serbia and turn all their forces against the invasion of the Russians. If "war is hell," Europe is a "hell" of a place. Most of our marooned Americans, many of whom are sheltered under their own roofs, can testify to this pointed fact.

Edward H. Reamer

Edward Hartley Reamer, formerly of Bedford, died in Philadelphia on Wednesday. He was a son of Henry C. and Christina Reamer, and was aged 37 years. Interment will be made in the Arlington Cemetery, Philadelphia, tomorrow (Saturday).

Killed on Railroad
Saturday night about 9:30 o'clock Albert E. Hendershot, formerly of this place, was instantly killed by being struck by a passenger locomotive near his home at West Elizabeth, Allegheny County. Mr. Hendershot was constable of the township in which he lived and had been called out to perform some duty pertaining to his office. He was walking on the tracks of the Monongahela Division of the P. R. R. when he was struck. He was 43 years of age and was born in Buck Valley, Fulton County. He came to Bedford County about twenty years ago and taught school several terms in Bedford Township. Later he conducted a store at Hyndman. Nineteen years ago he was married to Miss Effie Boore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Boore of this place, who, with three sons, Lester, Earl and Charles, survives. He is also survived by his parents, one sister and several brothers. Interment was made at Dravosburg, near McKeesport, Tuesday afternoon.

Robbery Near Ryot
Last Friday night the residence of Daniel Callihan of Dunkard Hollow, several miles west of Ryot, was robbed. Mr. Callihan and his son were helping a neighbor to thresh and the women of the household had gone for the cows late in the evening. During their absence, the robber entered the house. About $40 in cash, a watch and other articles of value were taken.

Mr. Callihan experienced a robbery some years ago, concerning which a tragic story of interest appeared in the county papers, as well as another account many years later, when one of the robbers, who was engaged in the theft and brutal assault upon Mr. Callihan, made a public confession of the crime and gave in an open letter the details of the occurrence.

Robbed; Accuses Brother-in-Law
Edward College, a miner living in East Providence Township, this county, was held up and robbed of $840 Sunday night. He says he recognized the highwayman, and Monday afternoon had Richard W. Poor, his brother-in-law, and William Griffin arrested. They were committed to jail to await trial.

Blackburn Reunion
Nearly fifty members of the Blackburn family from Bedford, Blair and surrounding counties attended their annual reunion at New Enterprise last Saturday. Splendid weather, excellent rations and pleasing entertainment caused the event to be one of much enjoyment. Cyrus Blackburn of Point was elected president and plans for a larger gathering next year were outlined.

Accepts New Call
Rev. A. B. Bunn Van Ormer, formerly of Schellsburg, and for five years pastor of the Shippensburg Lutheran Church, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Second Lutheran Church, Altoona. This pastorate has been vacant since last September. Three weeks ago Rev. Van Ormer preached in Altoona and was immediately given a call. He will begin his pastorate the early part of October.

Automobile Burned
A $2,700 Nyburg auto, owned and driven by G. H. Smith and wife of Moline, Ill., was almost completely destroyed on Tuesday by fire, caused by a leak in the gas line when they were descending the mountain this side of McConnellsburg, about twenty-five miles east of Bedford. They were unable to recover anything from the car except their bull dog. Two extra tires were slightly damaged. The owner carried $1,000 insurance on the car, and after wiring permission from the company, had it moved to Bedford. The couple were on their way home from Niagara Falls.

Bids Opened
Bids were opened Monday afternoon in Washington for the construction of the Federal building here. The lowest bidder was W. H. Fissell of New York, who bid $52,800 if limestone is used and $56,800 for sandstone construction. Mr. Fissell is the contractor who erected the Johnstown Postoffice building.

Large Fire
The large barn on the old Cypher farm near Cypher Station, which is owned by Scott Snyder and occupied by a tenant, was entirely destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday evening, August 16. The building cost over $1,500 and contained grain, machinery, etc., valued over $1,000, with an insurance of $1,000.

William O. Bruner

William O. Bruner, formerly of Bedford, died Sunday morning of enteric fever at the Altoona Hospital. He was a son of Charles W., deceased, and Carrie M. Bruner, and was born in Bedford December 24, 1886. He served two years in the United States marine service on the battleship Missouri and participated in the world tour of the battleship fleet some years ago. Following his return to Altoona he delivered lectures in that city and in this county, which proved entertaining and instructive.

His mother survives, as do five brothers and one sister: Harold and Thomas of Pittsburgh, and Harry, Richard, Charles and Annie M., of Altoona.

The body was brought here Tuesday morning and interment was made in the Bedford Cemetery.

Henry H. Bagley

Henry Harrison Bagley died very suddenly at the home of his son-in-law, Isaac Stickler, in Bedford Township, last Friday, from a paralytic stroke, aged 74 years, four months and 19 days. He was a son of the late Thomas and Sallie Bagley, and was born in Bedford April 2, 1840.

On December 18, 1862, he was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Jane Amos, who, with six daughters and one son, survive: Mrs. George Kimball of Napier Township, Mrs. Isaac Stickler and Mrs. Irvin E. Imber of Bedford Township, Charles T. of McMechen, W. Va., Miss Sara R., at home, Mrs. Herman F. Reese of Roaring Spring and Mrs. D. Oscar Nelson of Altoona. One brother and one sister are also living: Samuel Bagley of Bedford Township and Mrs. Eliza Cook of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Bagley was a member of the Pleasant Valley Lutheran Church. With the exception of a few years spent in Altoona, he always lived in Bedford Township, where he was highly respected by many friends.

Funeral services were held at his late residence near Bedford Monday afternoon, conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. J. Minemier. Interment was made in the Bedford Cemetery.

The following relatives from a distance attended the funeral: Mrs. Thomas Melroy of Pittsburgh, Messrs. John Stouffer of Rossville and Charles T. Bagley of McMechen, W. The Story of Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer

(Written by Frank B. Lord for the National Monthly.)

This story concerns the career, public and private, of the Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer, now Democratic Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, and prospective Senator from the Keystone State. Before entering into the subject proper, however, it may not be deemed out of place to present a brief prologue which shall have for its hero, Joseph C. Schroeder, postmaster at Matamoras, Pike County, Pennsylvania, for had it not been for Mr. Joseph, and had it not been that Joseph was on his job at the right moment, this sketch might never have been written, certainly, not at this time.

Moreover, had it not been for Joseph on his job, it is altogether probable that some one other than Woodrow Wilson would now be officiating in the little brown tent back of the White House. Postmaster Schroeder did not discover Woodrow Wilson, nor was he the first to suggest to any one that Woodrow Wilson would be an available candidate for the Democrats to nominate for Washington, called a meeting of the Democratic Congressmen from Pennsylvania and outlined to them a plan for re-organizing the Democratic party in the State, installing new leaders and equipping it with a new State Committee. The old organization confident that it could maintain control reluctantly consented to have the old State Committee called together, or perhaps it was forced to consent to the meeting.

Fifteen hundred Democrats from all parts of the State assembled in Harrisburg to watch and fight, and public sentiment was running high. Mitchell Palmer stood in the lime light. It was he who had forced the issue. The reform element gathered about his standard. Although not a member of the committee he was by courtesy extended the privileges of the floor and delivered a speech which was one of the efforts of his life. The old machine began to rattle and wobble. Its manipulators realized that a new force had risen in Democratic politics in the Keystone State. But they took a count and it showed that they would be

HON. A. MITCHELL PALMER

President. It is altogether likely that Colonel George Harvey could prove title to that distinction, if he prove title to that distinction, if he gentleman from Pike County, Pennsylvania, did do was to make Woodrow Wilson's nomination possible. Without him,—but why speculate, let's allow the incident in which he figured to speak for itself, and see if Schroeder of Pike County was not a factor with a big F.

It happened this way—and please pardon if the preface is a bit extended; it is necessary to the story.

Political affairs had so shaped themselves, or had been so shaped in the boss ridden commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in 1910, that all indications pointed toward the election of a Democrat as Governor. The prospects were certainly brighter for such a result than they had been at any time for twenty years, provided, of course, that the right man should be nominated by the party. The nominating convention met in Allentown, and throughout the entire State it was generally believed that the proper man to name was the Hon. C. LaRue Munson, a lawyer of highest standing and ability, widely known and conceded to possess the necessary qualifications for success.

At midnight before the day for the assembling of the delegates when the way seemed prepared for the nomination of Munson, practically without opposition, a bomb shell landed in the Democratic gathering in the form of an announcement from Munson that he would not be a candidate. Why he withdrew is another story, too long to be narrated here. It is sufficient to say that there was found to be a colored person concealed in the fire wood. Instead of nominating Munson on the following day the convention named the Hon. D. Webster Grinn, a Democrat of estimable character and a State Senator, but, under the circumstances and conditions which existed, having about as much chance of being elected as a five cent piece of ice has of maintaining its solidity on the equator.

The Democrats and independent voters of the State felt outraged and manifested their indignation by giving the Hon. William H. Berry, formerly State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, running on an independent ticket, four times as many votes as were received by Grinn. Following the ignominious defeat of Grinn at the polls, A. Mitchell Palmer, in able to turn down the Palmer re-organization scheme by a bare majority of one vote. The one vote necessary to win was represented by a man who held a proxy, not a proxy issued by a principal, but one which the organization would recognize; it was for the committeeman from Pike County. Just then Joseph C. Schroeder of Pike County, appeared upon the scene. Like a messenger with a pardon from the Governor in the melodramas, Joseph arrived just in the nick of time. He had been delayed. He had not heard the argument, but he was willing to trust Palmer. The proxy committeeman was forced to step aside in view of the presence of the actual committeeman who was Schroeder, and when the roll was called "Joe" voted for re-organization, and re-organization carried, 41 to 40.

The old organization was booted out of place and power and a new State Committee was formed; it was formed of the younger and reform element of the party and of the friends and admirers of Woodrow Wilson. When the time came they elected Woodrow Wilson delegates to the Baltimore convention and throughout the long series of ballots for the Presidential nomination Pennsylvania stood almost solidly for the then Governor of New Jersey. Without the seventy odd delegates from Pennsylvania Wilson's showing at the outset would have been meagre, and had they at any time faltered he could not have been nominated. If there had not been a re-organization of the Pennsylvania Democracy, and there would not have been such a re-organization had it not been for Joseph C. Schroeder, there would have been a different set of delegates to the Baltimore convention, and while it is not easy to say whom they would have supported, it is quite certain that they would not have been for Governor Wilson.

Speaking of your presidential Warwicks is not Postmaster Joseph C. Schroeder then some little ear!

When the town of Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania, was nothing but a Revolutionary fort, a party of Quakers from Orange County, New Jersey, migrated across New Jersey to a settlement of the Society of Friends on Fishing Creek in what is now Columbia County, Pennsylvania. En route they stopped on the estate of Col. Stroud, a wealthy landed proprietor of Colonial days. Col. Stroud an-

you have the first symptom of a run-down system, and nervous people too often conceal their aches and pains and suffer in silence, while, if neglected, this condition often foreruns more serious trouble. If those so afflicted would stop taking medicine containing alcohol or drugs, which menace the foundations of health, and just take the pure, strengthening nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, it would create new blood to pulsate through the organs, refresh their bodies and build up the whole nervous system. It is rich, sustaining nourishment, free from wines, alcohols or drugs. Shun substitutes.

nounced to them that there was need of a grist mill in the community and that it was his purpose to erect one if he could find a miller to run it. He was informed by the Quakers that one of their number, Obediah Palmer by name, had worked in a mill and was competent to take the job. His services were at once engaged and when the mill was completed Obediah Palmer became Col. Stroud's miller. But that was not all; he soon married one of the Stroud kinswomen, and since that time the Strouds and the Palmers have been identified with the life of the community. The town which sprang up was named for Col. Stroud, and although the Stroud name has all but disappeared from among the families in that locality, the Palmers are numerous and influential and have been so for a century.

A. Mitchell Palmer was born in the neighboring county of Luzerne, forty-one years ago, the son of Samuel B. Palmer, a contractor. He graduated from high school with the highest honors in his class. That was in 1886. For a year he attended the Moravian Parochial School at Bethlehem, preparing for college, and then passed the entrance examinations for Lehigh University. For generations, however, his ancestors had been members of the Society of Friends, and his parents were loyal Quakers who believed it to be their duty to send their son to one of the colleges maintained by that religious sect. Accordingly, young Palmer changed his plans and instead of entering Lehigh he became a student at Swarthmore College. He remained there for four years, graduating with the degree of A. B. in 1891, and sharing with his college chum, William C. Sprowl, now one of the Republican leaders in Pennsylvania, the first honors of his class.

The young man soon found, however, that even with a college education he was not entirely fitted for the duties of life. Looking about for an opportunity to earn a livelihood he decided upon a course which has led many another man to success. He took up the study of shorthand and applied himself to it with such diligence that at the end of four months he had so perfected himself in the art of stenography that he was soon afterwards appointed court stenographer by Judge Samuel S. Dreher, of the 43rd judicial circuit. This position gave him the chance which he sought and which he had longed for throughout his college course; it enabled him to study law. Within a little more than two years he was admitted to the bar, but he has never forgotten how to make the hooks and crooks, and even now he makes his notes in the shorthand code.

In entering upon the practice of his profession, Mr. Palmer was a little more fortunate than the average young lawyer who is obliged to wait for his clients to come to him. He formed a partnership with the late John B. Storm, one of the leading attorneys of Northeastern Pennsylvania. Soon the failing health of the senior member of the firm threw the burden of the responsibility of the partnership upon the junior member, and he found himself heir to a large country practice. It was a test of the ability which he possessed, for he was forced to meet in court some of the most skillful lawyers of the State. At one time early in his career he found himself sitting in court across the table from the late Marlin E. Olmsted of Harrisburg, for sixteen years a member of the House of Representatives, and one of the wealthiest as well as one of the ablest barristers of Central Pennsylvania. Mr. Olmsted was so impressed with the young man's ability as displayed in the case that he offered him a partnership in what was then the most prominent legal firm in the State capital. After considering the matter for a time Mr. Palmer decided that he would remain upon his own beather, and the fact that he did so finally brought him into politics.

The Stroudsburg community is generally Democratic under normal conditions, and while Mr. Palmer took a lively interest in public affairs and always allied himself with the Democratic party he steadfastly refused to become a candidate for office, although frequently importuned to do so, until 1908. Except under unusual conditions and when there has been a heavy Republican landslide, the Stroudsburg district has always sent a Democrat to represent it in Congress. It has been regarded as one of those Democratic strongholds which would be depended upon to elect the man named on the Democratic ticket. So much was this the case that the Democratic leaders formed an unwritten agreement to pass Congressional honors around among the prominent members of the party. In twenty years the district sent ten different men to the House of Representatives, where, because of the shortness of their political lives, they were never able to make an impression upon legislation. Even while not a candidate himself Mr. Palmer consistently opposed such a system, arguing that the district was not doing itself justice by following the plan of rotation, and allowing no one to remain in office long enough to make himself a force in national affairs.

In 1908, Mr. Palmer's friends insisted that he accept the Democratic nomination for Congress. He consented with the understanding that if he desired another term he would not abide by the old practice, but would be a candidate to succeed himself. He adopted the slogan "Rotation is rot," and went before the people with the avowed intention of putting an end to the system which had deprived the district of influence in Congress. Naturally, those who also possessed political aspirations opposed him, but he made his appeal to the voters, with the result that he carried every county in the district. Two years later, in 1910, the real test of the rotation system came when Representative Palmer announced himself a candidate for re-election, but again he won out in every county in the district. The third time he came up for election, the issue had practically disappeared. When Palmer first entered the House that body was controlled by the Republicans. Hailing from a "one-term" district, Speaker Cannon placed him at the foot of two unimportant committees, neither of which had held a meeting in years. This action, however, was not especially disadvantageous for it gave the new Congressman an opportunity and more time than he might otherwise have had, to look after the interests of his constituents and to make a careful study of public questions.

During the debate in the House on the Payne tariff bill, Representative Palmer obtained an hour's time in which to discuss it. Generally, tariff speeches in the House, unless made by the recognized leaders on one side or the other, are delivered to empty seats and vacant galleries. It was so when Mitchell Palmer arose to make his "maiden speech," but this condition did not long prevail. Soon the word was passed around that a new orator of skill and ability held the floor, and that he was presenting his argument with logic, force and impressiveness. The House gave him what it so infrequently gives to set speeches,—it gave him attention. When he had concluded he received an ovation, and men recalled the fact that Bryan had won his first honors under much the same circumstances. They recognized a new power in the House, and from that moment Mitchell Palmer has grown, not only in the estimation of the people of his own State and the country, until now, after five years of service in the House, he ranks with the leaders of that body, and unless all present indications are false he will be the next United States Senator from Pennsylvania, the first Democrat elected to the Upper house from that State since long before the Civil War.

Palmer's tariff speech not only gained him recognition among the House leaders, but it made him a logical candidate during his second term for a place on the Ways and Means Committee, then controlled by members of his own party, and the committee which not only deals with the tariff, but which has the general direction of affairs in the House. Singularly, although serving his second term the first meeting of a committee of the House which he attended was that of the Ways and Means Committee, where he was assigned by Chairman Underwood to write the iron and steel schedule.

Now, it so happens that one of the biggest steel plants in the country, the Bethlehem Steel Company, of which Charles M. Schwab is the head, is located in Mr. Palmer's district. What small effect that had upon the Representative's honesty of purpose is shown by the fact that after a careful study of the schedule and the industry Mr. Palmer wrote a measure which radically reduced the exorbitantly high protective rates on steel products. Naturally, from Mr. Schwab, a howl went up which was heard from one end of the country to the other; also, the steel trust made its threat that it would "get" the man who had the audacity to tamper with their pet rates. Palmer was wholly unmoved by these attempts at coercion, and defended the bill on the floor with unanswerable arguments. The bill passed the House and Senate, only to meet with the veto of President Taft.

When Palmer went back to his district for re-election it was to meet the determination of the Steel Trust to bring about his defeat, for Schwab had said that the Palmer iron and steel schedule bill would ruin the industry and force him to shut down his plant. But Mr. Schwab had only one vote in the Palmer district while his employees had thousands. Accordingly, Mr. Palmer made his appeal to the employees, showing them that it was the trust and not themselves which had profited by the excessive rates of duty on their products. Moreover, during his first term, Mr. Palmer had been instrumental in bringing about a settlement of the strike at the Bethlehem works which was highly satisfactory to the workers. Despite all that Schwab and the Steel Trust could do Palmer was again re-elected in 1912, by an overwhelming plurality. He had made an enemy of Schwab and the Steel Trust, but he had made friends of the thousands of workingmen in their employ. Again, when the Democrats came into full control of Congress and the Presidency, Representative Palmer wrote the iron and steel schedule of the Underwood bill. It is today a law, and the Bethlehem steel plant instead of being closed, as Mr. Schwab had predicted, is rushed with orders.

Mr. Palmer's work in re-organizing the Democracy of Pennsylvania has already been referred to in the story of J. C. Schroeder. He went to the Baltimore national convention at the head of a delegation pledged to the support of Governor Wilson for the presidential nomination. He was the recognized leader of the Wilson forces on the floor of the convention and surrounding him and aiding him were a score of able young lieutenants to whose steadfastness and determination was due to the final triumph of their cause. Time and again when the long drawn out contest was at its height, and it was impossible for any to predict with anything like reasonable assurance, upon whom the honor would fall, Mitchell Palmer was importuned to yield. A man of less resolute purpose and of greater personal ambitions might easily have capitulated, for the most tempting offers were made to the young Pennsylvanian to permit a break in the Wilson forces. He might have had the vice presidency or almost anything else with in the gift of the convention. To all of these overtures he turned a deaf ear and continued to stand as firm as adamant. The same strength of character which he displayed upon that occasion has been one of the chief factors in his success. No man could ever justly accuse Mitchell Palmer of being a weakling. He has in a marked degree the quality which is characterized as backbone; he has courage, conviction and de-

NEW REGULATIONS FOR FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION

The new meat-inspection regulations governing the slaughtering of cattle, sheep, swine and goats, and the preparation of meat food products in inspected establishments, were signed by the Secretary of Agriculture on July 15, 1914.

All the regulations become effective November 1, 1914, except those governing imported meats, which go into effect January 1, 1915.

The Department of Agriculture is limited by law to jurisdiction over the slaughtering and packing establishments which sell their products in interstate or foreign commerce. These establishments slaughter 60 per cent. of the meat used in the United States. The slaughtering and packing establishments which sell their product wholly within the State in which the animals are slaughtered are beyond the jurisdiction of the department.

The new regulations, which occupy 87 printed pages, codify the many amendments and rulings made since the adoption of the old regulations on April 1, 1908, and also add to the requirements a number of features suggested by eight years' experience in meat inspection and conforming with recent scientific discoveries.

The more important changes, made as the result of the development of veterinary science and practical experience in meat inspection, are as follows:

Diseased Animals to be Condemned Prior to Slaughter

The new regulations provide that inspectors shall make a rigid ante-mortem inspection, and if they find clear evidence in the live animal of the existence of a disease which unfits its meat for food they shall condemn the animal and prevent its entry for slaughter into the food-preparing departments of the establishment. The animal so condemned must be slaughtered in a separate place and put at once into the denaturing tank to be turned into fertilizer or other nonedible products. This rule is more strict than the ante-mortem inspection prescribed in the old regulations.

Heretofore animals showing some evidence of disease on ante-mortem inspection were slaughtered on the same killing floors as healthy animals, and were not finally condemned until they were subjected to post-mortem examination.

Under the new rules, where the ante-mortem inspector suspects a live animal of having a disease which might render it unfit for food, but is not certain of this condition, he will, as in the past, mark the animal "U. S. Suspect," which will make its carcass subject to special post-mortem examination. The ante-mortem inspector is also authorized to detain the animal for further observation and taking of temperature in cases where that seems desirable in reaching a decision.

All animals at the time of slaughter, even though no symptoms of disease are visible on ante-mortem examination, are subject to careful post-mortem examination before the meat can be marked "U. S. Inspected and Passed" and allowed to leave the establishment.

Withdrawal of Inspection

The regulations prescribe that any inspected establishment which violates any regulation may suffer the penalty of having all inspection withdrawn. This would mean that such establishments could not ship any meat in interstate commerce or abroad. This is designed to strengthen the department's authority to compel establishments to observe sanitary conditions.

Packers to be Permitted to Sell Second-Class Sterilized Meat on a Plan Somewhat Similar to That Followed by the German and Austrian Governments.

In view of the present shortage and high prices of meat, and the fact that every pound of meat that is condemned necessarily adds to the cost of producing meat that is passed, and the new regulations provide measures whereby the packers can sterilize and cook thoroughly certain classes of meat and sell it in cans or sealed containers, labeled plainly "Second-Class Sterilized."

This sterilized cooked meat, which the packers are to be permitted to sell as "Second-Class Sterilized," is the meat of portions of animals the fat of which the old regulations permitted the packers to make into edible lard and tallow. The process of rendering served to sterilize the fat and make it entirely hygienic. The new plan extends the same principle so as to utilize the lean portions of this meat which heretofore packers have not been allowed to sell for food purposes.

This action follows scientific investigations made by specialists of the department, and by independent veterinarians and physiologists, which have made it clear that large quantities of meat which are perfectly good food when thoroughly cooked have been condemned because of the presence of strictly localized cysts or lesions in animals. This meat is of the type which the German and Austrian Governments have long permitted their packers to sterilize by cooking and sell in cans in a cooked condition.

This meat, which, cooked, finds ready sale at a lower price than raw meat, and Austria, consists of portions of the flesh of animals which have localized cysts or lesions which make the immediately affected muscle or tissue unsuitable for food, but which do not affect the remaining flesh of the animal or render it unhealthful. Portions (usually organs and glands) containing cysts or lesions are cut away and condemned. These cysts and lesions do not come from any of the highly dangerous diseases, for any indications of which the regulations require the condemnation of the whole carcass.

Under both the old and the new regulations, in cases where the diseased condition is trivial and strictly localized, the unaffected portions of the carcass, which are free from any suspicion of disease, are passed for food and allowed to be sold in the raw state.

On the other hand, all carcasses and all parts diseased to an extent rendering them unfit for food are condemned. Between these two classes lies the class of meat which may be sterilized under the new regulations. This consists of parts of carcasses believed to be entirely healthful, but which come from carcasses affected to a somewhat greater extent than would allow the passing of these parts for food in the raw state, because these parts may contain a chance cyst which, if eaten raw, might lead to tapeworm or other diseases. These accidental cysts or lesions, even if present, are rendered entirely harmless by thorough sterilization in cooking.

While the packers of Germany and Austria for many years have widely availed themselves of this method of saving, by cooking, a huge waste of meat, it is not known how far the American packers will care to follow the practice. It is believed, however, that if it is undertaken it will make available a large quantity of cooked meat which is now wasted.

Post-Mortem Inspection

The provisions relating to the post-mortem inspection of carcasses have been made clearer and more explicit, so as to make the rules under which the inspectors pass or condemn carcasses or portions of them exact and in accordance with the latest scientific knowledge. The regulations governing the carcasses of hogs suspected of hog cholera have been made much more stringent.

Safeguarding Inspection Marks

The rules and regulations governing the disposal of condemned meat and the use and integrity of the Federal marks have been redrafted to meet fully all conditions which have developed during the past six years. As a result, it is made certain that the mark "U. S. Inspected and Passed" can appear only on meat that has passed a rigid ante-mortem and post-mortem inspection at the hands of skilled veterinarians.

Raw Pork Prohibited in Certain Food Products

On account of the danger from trichinae in pork and the lack of any known method of inspection which affords an absolute safeguard, the regulations prescribe that no muscle tissue of pork shall be allowed as an ingredient of any article such as summer sausage, or similar foods, which customarily are eaten without cooking.

WHY WOMEN SUFFER

ing. To be included in the list, which may be eaten at home, the pork must have been subjected to a temperature sufficient to destroy all live trichinae. It is possible that some other method of sterilization may hereafter be discovered.

Sanitary Regulations

The regulations governing the sanitary condition of packing establishments, the cleanliness of employees, and the care of utensils and instruments, have been redrafted into a series of definite rules. This, it is believed, makes compliance with the rules easier on the part of the packers and makes detection of violations simpler for the inspectors.

These rules are very explicit as to the provision of washing and toilet facilities for the help, as to the condition of clothing, and as to the cleanliness of the hands of those handling the meat. The rules also explicitly prohibit the passing of meat which has been allowed to touch floors or become contaminated by contact with condemned meat or knives used in butchering diseased meat.

Imported Meat

The regulations regarding imported meats are redrafted so as to be more comprehensive and complete. Each foreign country from which meats are being shipped to the United States will be supplied with copies, as will United States consuls, so that a strict compliance with them may be had.

Food For Thought

Some think: It is only heavy drinking that harms. Experiments show: That even moderate drinking injures health and lessens efficiency. Some think: Alcohol braces us for hard work and against fatigue. Experiments show: That alcohol in no way increases muscular strength or endurance. Alcohol lowers vitality and opens the door to disease. Resolved, at the International Congress on Tuberculosis, 1905, to combine the fight against alcohol with the struggle against tuberculosis. At the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, the use of alcohol as a medicine declined 77 per cent. in eight years. Our prison commissioners reported that 95 per cent. of those who went to prison in 1911 had intemperate habits. Yet the public says: We need the revenue from liquor. The public should know—how small is the revenue compared with the costs of carrying the wreckage. Your money supports this wreckage. Your will allows it. Your indifference endangers your nation. Commercialized vice is promoted through alcohol. CITIZENS, THINK! Arrayed against alcohol are economy, science, efficiency, health, morality—the very assets of a nation—the very soul of a people.

WHY POPE PIUS WAS LOVED

It is very frequently the case, when a man climbs from a lowly origin to some position of high authority and dignity, that he forgets the steps by which he rose. He loses sympathy for the poor and struggling. He assumes that because he was able to rise, others are at fault if they do not also succeed, forgetting that most people have not the endowments of power and force which permitted him to climb.

The sorrow manifested at the death of Pope Pius X is not limited to those of his own religious faith. Anyone who will scan the history of his life can see here the record of a singularly fine character. Born in a family of eight children, who were raised on a wage of $1.75 a week, he knew all the grind of poverty. His life in the splendor of the Vatican was made simple and informal, so far as he could escape from the machinery of a great position, as it had been in the hills of Treviso.

His example of humility and simplicity is particularly valuable from the tendencies within the church toward aristocracy and formality.

Any great church acquires its magnificence. Perhaps it needs it, for the assertion of its dignity and importance. But too often these exterior trappings tend to remove the ministers of the gospel from the simple people of every day life. It was the distinction of Pius, that up to the limit of his ability, and so long as he could, he answered personally all letters and appeals for help, and made it a point to see whoever wished to see him.

JORDAN'S OSTERBURG SPEECH

Hon. John H. Jordan attempted to make a speech at the Osterburg Picnic in which he exploded some of his little fibs, for which he is so widely known over Bedford County, that nobody pays much attention. However, Jordan didn't assume much faith in the intelligence of the people out there when he remarked that the government expected to raise war revenue by placing a tax on real estate. That statement is as far away from the truth as Mr. Jordan is from Heaven. The national government, never wished, does not now wish and will not wish to raise war revenue by tax on real estate and Mr. Jordan knows that as well as any farmer knows it. The government has been considering the advisability of placing a tax on tobacco and spirituous liquors. Whether that would take any pennies out of Mr. Jordan's pockets or not we don't know, but we do know that no tax on real estate is contemplated and never has been contemplated even in extreme cases.

During McKinley's administration we raised revenue by paying a stamp tax, placed on checks, notes, bills of exchange, patent medicines, etc., but not on real estate. In fact it is doubtful whether the government could lay a tax on real estate as it would be a direct tax, as decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, and no direct tax, constitutionally, can be laid except in times of war and that means war with the United States, not between other countries. A great many remarked that the speech seemed to them as if it was one of the old speeches he had committed to memory while in school. So might it be.

MODERN WAR

The popular conception of war sees a battle as a line of men with colors flying and cheering officers, led forward in dress parade against a similarly arranged foe. Over on some hill is the general watching the battle with field glasses, and sending dispatches by mounted aides on frothing horses.

Modern war has made such methods as obsolete as the Roman galley. Battle flags are a means of attracting the enemy's fire. The general sits in some quiet office or field station miles from the front, and talks with his officers by telephone or wireless.

War has become a business and industrial proposition. The slightest failure in detail may wreck a campaign.

In the Balkan War the Montenegrins illustrated the failure of old style warfare. The picturesque mountaineers were called the best fighters in Europe. They disdained to carry trenching tools. So it cost them three times as many men and four times as much time to capture Scutari as would have been taken by scientific fighters with the spade.

There is no place in modern warfare for the individual hero. He would interfere with discipline. Everyone has to be a hero. That involves an efficient commissariat. Good fighting is never done by hungry men.

Still, the human element can never be systematized out of war. By incessant target practice the marksman learns to shoot straight, which was the reason why the United States beat Spain in 1898 so readily. The other human element of enthusiasm is partly a matter of national temperament, partly a sense of the justice of the cause. Such are the great factors in this war of the gods on the frontier of France.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE

Under Republican administrations our merchant marine was left to go by default and all our shipping was carried on by private vessels owned by private people which finally worked into a great combination or shipping trust. This trust got so big and inflated and arrogant that it defied the government on many occasions in legislation, and in order to enforce legislation satisfactory to its interests, this great shipping trust refused to carry freight to foreign trade. Of course this closed up any balance of trade in our favor and would work hardships on our people by cutting down prices, stagnating the home markets and throwing people at home out of work (Penrose's Hard Times Plan).

Our merchant marine was instituted at the birth of this nation, the birth of both being identical and it maintained strong advocates in the United States Senate up until the Civil War, or up until the Republicans began to take hold and hand everything over to private interests and special privilege. Up until the Civil War the United States government possessed a tonnage in marine shipping second only to Great Britain and her colonies and there was every promise and hope that she would excel even her mother country. But after the Civil War when the protective tariff system began slowly but surely to grip the throats of the common people, these protective interests began to see a clear monopoly of domestic and foreign commerce which they grabbed as quickly and as eagerly as hyenas at their prey. With the Republican administrations as their allies they succeeded in eliminating the government owned vessels and bought up the marine service for themselves, and the people stood by with eyes closed and even the North American didn't see it, the paper which has the people so close to its heart, at times.

These great concerns, among which are the United States Steel Corporation, owning five vessels; the Standard Oil Company, owning 70 vessels; and the United Fruit Company, owning 23 vessels are clamoring now to come under the United States government and fly the American flag. This addition or purchase would make the American merchant marine possess a 1,000,000 tons capacity, and it has reached nearly 6,000,000 tons.

Can anyone, Republican, Progressive, Democrat or any other partisan see why we would hand a business over to private individuals to regulate prices and trade as they see fit and squeeze the poor people of the world, not only of the United States, but of the WORLD, financially until their eyeballs bulge out or choke them with a monopolistic grip until their tongues are black as the ace of spades? It is high time that a President and a Congress is at the head of the government who will stop this throttling of trade and competition and who will give each one a chance on his merits.

Twenty-Fifth Anniversary

One of the most enthusiastic gatherings in the Methodist Church for some time was held last evening in honor of the organization of the Epworth League on May 15, 1889, at Cleveland, O. The Epworth League was organized as the Official Young People's Society of the Methodist Church August 27, following, under the pastorate of Rev. M. L. Smyser. The local chapter was organized in the Bedford Methodist Church, being the first chapter in the Juniata District. Among the features of the program last evening was an appropriate song written for the occasion by Miss L. D. Shuck and sung to the tune of Auld Lang Syne by the charter members who are still living and could be present. Greetings were also read by some of the first officers, who have since removed from Bedford and could not be here for the anniversary occasion.

Rev. E. C. Kehoch, president of the Juniata District of Epworth Leagues, and district delegate to the International Silver Anniversary of the Epworth League at Buffalo, July 1-5, was present and gave a stirring report of this great international gathering of Epworthians. The pastor, Rev. Faus, made some timely remarks on Facing the Future. Miss Emma Shuck delighted the audience with a solo, and other special music was rendered.

After a delightful social hour, all went their ways with the prayer, God bless the Epworth League and help its members to "Look Up and Lift Up" with greater zeal and efficiency in the years to come than in the years that are past.

Springhope

August 26—Several of our folks attended campmeeting at Pine Grove on Sunday and report that quite a large crowd was present.

Mrs. Zora Custer and daughter of Windber, former residents of this place, are visiting friends here at present.

William Jordan, wife and daughter of Windber were Sunday visitors at this place.

William A. Hoover, who has been ill, is now able to sit up.

William Hazelton and wife of Johnstown are visiting relatives at this place.

The church will meet to select a successor September 6 after the morning service. Rev. McGuire will preach at Coalmont Saturday evening and at Saxton Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

HECKERMAN LETTER

"Happy Bill" Sends Communication From Quaker City.

Philadelphia, August 25.—I was having a dinner the other day. Nothing new in that is there? Near me sat three ladies; nothing new in that, either. They were very busy chatting about various items, when one of them spoke up and said rather loudly, "I adore a man who is fond of animals, it shows he has a good heart." "Not too fond," said one of the others. "Why I used to think very much as you do and as most girls think. In fact what at first attracted me to my husband was his fondness for his two dogs. I reasoned that a man who could think so much of dogs must have a large lot of affection in his heart and that the woman whom he loved would be very fortunate indeed. Had I not been so much in love I suppose I would have seen indications to warn me from marrying a man whose dogs cringed when he spoke sharply to them, but they obeyed him beautifully and he, of course, fondled them a great deal, and I am proud to say that I did not look beneath the surface until after my marriage to that man. Why some men who can train a dog into perfection don't know how to treat a wife. I have seen my husband train dogs, I have seen him whip a dog almost insensible to cure it of a bad fault and afterwards I have seen the satisfied light in my husband's eyes when the poor dog crawled to him and licked his hands. Yes, when he felt like it he would vent his temper on a dog, knowing that the animal would not resent it but would be as affectionate after the kick as before. When he felt like petting anything the dog was nearby, perfectly willing and could be sent away when his mood for petting had passed away. As a matter of pride he fed and cared well for his dogs, having them at all times well groomed." She added, "My husband treated me as he did his dogs. At first I believe he loved me fully as much as he did his favorite dog, but when I did not 'pan out' as he expected; when I, figuratively, bit the hand that fed me and refused to fawn after chastisement he hated me and wanted to get rid of me. I have not any use for any human being who is not fond of animals to a certain extent, but one thing is certain and that is I should never again marry a man who is so much wrapped up in animals, that when he gets a wife he would know nothing better for her than to apply the animal treatment to her."

No doubt, we have, one and all, heard of the farmer who insists upon a certain rest time for his horses but never thinks of insisting that the old woman sit down and take it easy at any time of the day or night. And though we condemn those women who make pets of dogs there are wives who can tell you that the only member of the household that comes first in their husband's regard is a pedigreed pup.

"Twice on a cold and snowy evening in January when Mr. — came home. There before the grate lay a big dog, the pet of the man who came in. The dog raised his head, wagged his tail and looking up into the master's face with a broad grin of satisfaction lay down again. The master looking at him said, "Well, I wonder who is the dog after all. There you lie in the warmth; the snow and cold don't worry you, while I must go out and brave the storm, to get something for you to eat and now pray tell me who is the dog after all?" Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

Chester Culp is employed as stenographer for A. B. Ross.

The potato crop in this section is not yielding as well as was expected.

D. F. Berkheimer

David Franklin Berkheimer, a well known and highly esteemed resident of Osterburg, died at his home Monday morning, August 17, about 9:30 o'clock, from paralysis. He was born September 11, 1850, hence was aged 63 years, 11 months and six days.

He was stricken with a paralytic stroke September 5, 1911, and was unable to use his whole right side, but he was still able to be up and around most of the time until the 11th of last June when he had the second stroke. He kept growing weaker all the time but was not bedfast except for a few days now and then until on Wednesday previous to his death. The following Saturday night he had the third stroke about 9:30 o'clock. Dr. Brumbaugh, his physician who was in Bedford at the time, was quickly summoned to his bedside. This stroke paralyzed his left side and gave him use of his right side again which he had not had for three years. He was conscious and cheerful until the very moment of his death, never complaining and when asked how he felt, his answer was always "pretty good."

He was a very quiet, kind and loving father and husband, and had many friends. He united with the Trinity Reformed Church when he was sixteen years old. He was united in marriage on October 26, 1882, with Miss Jeanette Smith who survives him, also five children, who greatly mourn their loss: Bruce Berkheimer, Mrs. M. H. Snyder of Osterburg, Charles of King, Effie and Zella at home. He had seven granddaughters and three grandsons; also two sisters and one brother, Mrs. Mandilla Gettys of Connellsville, Mrs. George Acker and Amos Berkheimer of Osterburg. One infant son, John, preceded him to the other world about twenty-four years ago and a daughter, Mrs. Fred Rininger, about ten years ago.

The funeral service was held at the Reformed Church at Osterburg Thursday morning, conducted by Rev. J. W. Zehring, his pastor. A large number of relatives and friends were present to pay their last respect.

Clark Family

At a recent gathering of the Clark family near Mann's Choice there were present Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, host and hostess of near Mann's Choice; Andrew Clark of Quimby, Ia., Jacob Clark and wife, Isaac Clark and Mr. and Mrs. James Clark of Cook's Mills; Mrs. Ellen Bruner, Mr. and Mrs. John Clark and daughters of Bedford; Mrs. Ross Clark and Miss Richards of Canton, O., Mr. and Mrs. John Stalling and son of Cumberland; Miss Fern Clark of Quimby, Ia., Miss Nellie Clark, Miss Marian Bloomer, Miss Marie Clark and Mrs. D. Enos of Buffalo Mills; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Davis, Miss Effie Bruner, Harry Clark, John Clark, Jr., and Rev. E. A. Snook.

Under a great, wide spreading tree which has for a century and longer proudly stood as a shelter and ornament, all feasted and engaged in games and social interviews realizing that the occasion was one to be long remembered.

New Paris

August 25—Ex-County Superintendent C. J. Potts and wife of Altoona were welcome visitors in our village over Sunday.

Simon R. Blackburn, wife and son of Windber spent a few days in our town recently, the guests of T. K. Blackburn.

Rev. W. F. Conley, daughter Ruby and son Raymond, of Connellsville were callers in our village last week.

Daniel Helman and family have moved into their new dwelling north of town and are enjoying the same.

Mrs. Charles Anderson and Mrs. Loretta Shaffer of Hollidaysburg are the guests of Mrs. Eliza Shriner this week.

On August 13 at Cumberland, two of our young people, Bruce Blackburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Blackburn, and Miss Elizabeth Crissman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Crissman were united in matrimony. They expect to locate in Johnstown. They have our best wishes.

Miss Olive Moore, Pierce Conner and daughter and John Willis of Altoona were visitors in our vicinity on Saturday.

Mrs. George Mitchell and daughters, Edith and Lillian, are the guests of Henry Mitchell and family at present.

The picnic held at this place on Saturday under the auspices of the New Paris Cornet Band, was largely attended and a social time was enjoyed by all who were present. A large number of families picnicked in the grove. Excellent music was furnished by the visiting band of Springhope as well as the home band. A few selections of vocal music were rendered by the male quartet of New Paris. The most interesting amusement of the day was the game of baseball played by the Bedford and New Paris clubs. The game was called at the close of the seventh inning, with a score of 8 to 10 in favor of the visiting club. The Bedford boys were very courteous and gentlemanly, and it is hoped this will not be their last visit at this place. Caj.

European War Zone Map

With its characteristic desire to secure for its subscribers the latest and most authentic news concerning the European war, The North American will on next Sunday, August 30, present to its readers a double-page map of Europe, showing in detail the location of every important city mentioned in the various war dispatches, giving location and size of armies, various fortifications, strategic points and their relation to the various armies.

Many people have forgotten most of the geography, and few have any idea of the exact location of the various cities and towns mentioned every day in the papers.

This map is intended to fill up this gap, and will be kept and treasured by the many thousand readers of The North American, to be studied and referred to during the war.

The demand for next Sunday's North American is sure to be enormous, and in order to make sure of getting a copy, it would be well to notify your agent or dealer to serve you a copy, today.

Don't miss this opportunity of securing the latest and most improved map of Europe without any additional cost.

The supply is limited and it will be necessary to order at once in order to secure a copy.

Announces Engagement

Misses Katharine and Mildred Williams of Everett entertained a number of friends recently in honor of Miss Mary Barnsdollar, at their home, "Edgewood," Everett.

Refreshments were served in small individual baskets tied with yellow ribbons. Favors were tiny "bride slippers" filled with rice.

The guests were Miss Mary Barnsdollar, the autumn bride to be, Misses Lucy McClure and visitor, Ray Driden of Indianapolis, Ind.; Irene Apple, Clara Barnsdollar, Sylvia Harris, Mona Piper, Velma Sheeder, Meriam Mann and visitor, Miss Akers of Altoona, Mrs. Raymond Bowers of Pittsburgh, Mrs. A. C. Whetstone and Misses Mildred and Katharine Williams.

Another clever feature of this afternoon's entertainment was the way in which Miss Katharine announced her engagement. In the little "bride slippers," hidden beneath the rice, was one little heart on which was written: David Whetstone-Katharine Williams.

NEW TURN GIVEN TO STATE CAMPAIGN

Vance McCormick Announces a Far-Reaching Plan for Organizing the Boys of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, August 24.—The newest form of political campaigning yet conceived, even in this era of putting all issues directly up to the people, was announced today by Vance C. McCormick, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, on behalf of the State Committee.

This is an elaborate scheme for organizing the boys of the State as "The Friends of Pennsylvania," with a view to making permanent the overthrow of corrupt politics. The idea reflects the bent of Mr. McCormick's mind, as long an earnest worker for the welfare of boys, and his confidence in the abstract principles of good citizenship. The statement given out by Mr. McCormick explains the plan:

"Our duty is to think for tomorrow, as well as for today. We must do more than secure the present overthrow of that brand of misgovernment which has come to be called 'Penroseism'; we are bound to train the voters of tomorrow to make the victory permanent. This is not a matter of party politics, but of bed-rock good citizenship.

"So some of us, who have been working for the redemption of Pennsylvania, are organizing the boys of the State as the Friends of Pennsylvania. This will be a non-partisan league. There is nothing in its nature to tie it up exclusively to any one party. It will seek to enroll the members of the Boy Scouts, the boys of the schools and the members of the athletic clubs of the State, making to all of them that appeal to patriotism and loyalty which youth is most responsive.

"We want to increase pride in Pennsylvania, and so to purify the State politically that nobody will have reason to blush for his citizenship in the greatest State of the Union."

"Our organization is simple. We have a motto, 'I am for Pennsylvania,' which has already been printed on neat little 'true blue' buttons, which are being distributed by tens of thousands to the boys of the State. Each boy who wears the badge is asked to subscribe to the following declaration of principles and pledge:

"Purpose. To maintain Pennsylvania's good name and to be an earnest enemy of every man, political organization, institution or custom that would mar Pennsylvania's political purity or weaken her moral integrity. The pledge is as follows:

"I believe in Pennsylvania, my State. I glory in the ideals upon which she was founded, in the noble part she has borne in the country's history, and in the character of her people today.

"As a sacred obligation to loyalty, I pledge myself to defend the good name of my State, and to endeavor myself to be such a free, fearless and patriotic citizen as will reflect honor upon her name.

"For the sake of Pennsylvania I promise to use my sincerest and most intelligent efforts to learn the facts concerning political conditions and candidates for public office; and to oppose, with all my might, any party or man that is unworthy of the best traditions and ideals of Pennsylvania.

"To this end, I solemnly covenant to put patriotism above partisanship, and above all personal considerations; that I may be a true citizen of the Keystone State, and I shall seek to enlist others in this same pledged allegiance."

"You see," continued Mr. McCormick, "instead of training up a generation of boys accustomed to the criticism and disparagement of their own State, we seek to promote such a Pennsylvania esprit de corps as will make it impossible for political evils to survive in a new atmosphere of militant loyalty and patriotism."

Farmers, mechanics, railroaders, laborers, rely on Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Fine for cuts, burns, bruises. Should be kept in every home, 25c and 50c.—Adv.

EFFECT OF WAR ON SUPPLY OF POTASH SALTS

Present Situation

Outside of Germany there is no known commercial supply of potash salts. If the German supplies are cut off during the European war, the agricultural world must either go without potash salts after the meagre supply now on hand is exhausted or bestir itself to find another adequate source of supply. Already many inquiries regarding potash have been addressed to the United States Geological Survey, and the fertilizer journals report that small quantities of spot material are changing hands at sharp premiums. The situation is undoubtedly more acute than it was a few years ago, when national interest was first awakened to the fact that the United States is entirely dependent on Germany for this important class of fertilizer materials.

Wide Use of Potash Salts

Potash salts are employed in many industries other than the fertilizer industry. A large amount is used in glass and soap making and in the manufacture of a number of chemical products. These include potassium hydrate, or caustic potash, and the carbonate and bicarbonate of potash, used principally in glass and soap making; the potash alums; cyanides, including potassium cyanide, potassium ferri-cyanide, and potassium ferri-cyanide; various potash bleaching chemicals, dye stuffs, explosives containing potash nitrate, and a long list of general chemicals.

The Work of the Geological Survey

The needs of the manufacturers and the farmers of the country are well known and keenly appreciated by the Geological Survey. Since the question of a domestic supply of potash salts has become of public interest, the Government has endeavored to locate deposits in this country, and has followed up every clue that seemed to promise results of importance. The Survey's work has extended from New York to California and from Michigan to Louisiana, and has covered all branches of investigation where results might be expected, exclusive of the study of kelp. Its investigations have been carried out along several lines. (1) Deep drilling for saline residues has been done at Fallon and, during the past year, in Columbus Marsh and Black Rock Desert, Nevada, and will be continued in Black Rock Desert this year. (2) Natural and artificial brines and bitterns have been collected at all the salt-making establishments in the United States and a great many other localities, and examined. (3) Deposits of alunite and other minerals, containing potassium, have been investigated in Utah and other States. (4) Certain occurrences of igneous rock known to contain considerable quantities of potash salts have been examined. Much work has also been done by private initiative along practically all the lines mentioned above. The Bureau of Soils, of the Department of Agriculture, has investigated the kelps. The work is not yet finished and will be pushed with increased vigor, provided the necessary funds are supplied.

To all those interested in the subject the Geological Survey will be pleased to send free of charge the available reports which have been issued on potash salts. Inquiries should be addressed to the Director, U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

Extent of Imports

The imports of potash salts, listed as such in the reports of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, include the carbonate, cyanide, chloride, nitrate and sulphate, caustic potash, and other potash compounds. The importation of the above salts in round numbers the last three years has averaged 635,000,000 pounds in quantity and $11,000,000 in value. These figures, however, represent only a part of the potash salts entering the United States, as they do not include the imports of kainite and manure salts which are used in fertilizers. The quantity of this class of materials imported for consumption in the United States during the last three years has averaged 700,000 tons valued at $4,300,000 annually. Thus it is apparent that the annual importations of potash salts exceed $15,000,000.

GAINS 40 POUNDS IN 40 DAYS

Remarkable Results of the New Tissue Builder Tonneline Tablets in Many Cases of Run-Down Men and Women.

Prove It Yourself by Buying a Box of Tonneline Tablets Now.

"By George, I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Tonneline Tablets, for building up of weight and lost nerve force. It acted more like a miracle than a medicine," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revolution that had taken place in his condition. "I began to think there was nothing on earth that could make me fat. I tried tonics, digestives, heavy eating, diets, milk, beer and almost everything else you could think of, but without result."

Any man or woman who is thin can recover normal weight by the best new treatment, Tonneline Tablets. "I have been thin for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way. Finally I read about the remarkable processes brought about by use of Tonneline Tabs, so I decided to try it myself. Well, when I look at myself in the mirror now, I think it is somebody else. I have put on just forty pounds during the last forty days, and never felt stronger or more 'nervy' in my life."

Tonneline Tabs are a powerful inducer to nutrition, increases cell growth, food, increases the number of blood corpuscles and as a necessary result builds up muscles, and solid healthy flesh, and rounds out the figure.

For women who can never appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness this remarkable treatment may prove a revelation. It is a beauty maker as well as a form builder and nerve strengthener. Tonneline Tabs cost $1 for a 50-days' treatment, at druggists, or mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.—Adv. War Raises Price of Tin

The outbreak of the European war has caused the New York price of tin to rise to 65 cents a pound, although in the latter part of July tin was sold as low as 30.5 cents a pound. None of the European countries make a production which would greatly affect market values, and the disturbance of price is due mostly to the insecurity of ocean freights which are carried very largely in English or German bottoms.

The known American tin deposits are small, and production from them will probably not be much affected by the exceedingly high prices if these are temporary. However, the operators now working tin deposits may reap a profit if they can market their ores before the drop in prices that is sure to come.

The benefit which it seems possible to get out of the present situation is in the establishment of a tin smelter in the United States in which to smelt Bolivian tin ores and such small lots of American ore as are produced. At present between 30,000 and 40,000 tons of tin concentrates carrying more than 20,000 tons of metallic tin are shipped each year from Bolivia to Europe for smelting. The United States would absorb the tin smelted from this ore easily, and it has been demonstrated that there are no difficulties in the smelting of the Bolivian ores that American metallurgists can't meet. Owing to the lack of European freighters, Bolivian ores will now be seeking a market, and, providing that ships can be found to carry the ore, this will be the opportunity for Americans to begin purchasing the ores that have heretofore gone to Europe.

A few years ago a smelter was established at Bayonne, N. J., in which to smelt Malayan tin ores, but when it became known the English Government placed a high export duty on Malayan tin ores not going to some part of the British Empire. Such a thing could not happen in Bolivia, and to some extent, at any rate, the smelting of Bolivian and other ores in this country would relieve American consumers from the speculative profits of the London market.

Program for One-Room Schools

Prof. D. C. Koch, Inspector of High Schools, has arranged a daily program for use in one-room schools. It aims to reduce the number of classes and to economize time by alternations and combination of classes. The plan has been definitely and successfully tried out.

Explanation of Program for One-Room Schools

The accompanying program is planned for one-room schools. The aim of the plan is to reduce the number of recitations per day and thereby increase the length of the recitation periods. In schools of large enrollment this can be done (1) by teaching the pupils of two different grades together, (2) by teaching such subjects as writing, drawing, music and handwork to the whole school, (3) by teaching parts of certain studies to two grades on alternate years, (4) by correlation of subjects such as reading and spelling.

Teachers are urged to work out the plan of teaching one part of a subject as geography to the pupils of the fifth and sixth grades one year and another part of it the next year. Grades may be combined to advantage in geography, history, reading, spelling, language and physiology. According to this plan courses in certain studies are omitted on alternate years and the work in the remaining courses is made more effective because the teacher is required to prepare fewer lessons.

One usually finds that half of the pupils in a third grade read about as well as half of the pupils in the fourth grade. The good readers will help the poor readers and the plan will no doubt be found practicable provided the reading material used is not too difficult.

Two grades in arithmetic may be conducted at the same time by having the pupils of one grade occupied at a list of problems while the other division is receiving instruction or explaining problems. The pupils of both grades may be given practice together for speed and accuracy.

Where the school day begins at 8:45 or earlier the schedule of classes can easily be changed and adjusted to meet the new conditions. A longer day will allow more time for some classes. A plan showing study periods for all the grades should be worked out by each teacher.

"Connie" Mack, Manager of Philadelphia Athletics, Against Drinking.

"Five years ago," said "Connie" Mack, the great baseball manager, to a writer for McClure's, "I would take a man who drank, provided I thought I could handle him and gradually break him of the habit. Now I wouldn't bother with a youngster who drinks. That's my fixed policy."

Isn't that about as effective a temperance lesson as ever was preached? Here is the manager of a club that repeatedly has won the world championships, a wonderful judge of men and an extraordinary executive who holds that it isn't worth while to fool with the youngster who drinks.

Booze, Mack says, slows a man down and keeps him from thinking as quickly as he ought to if he is to play on a winning team. So booze must go. It isn't a matter of morality. It's a matter of efficiency.—Star.

Under-Inflation Ruins Tires

A uniform tire pressure must be maintained at all times if you would get full service from tires. There is more danger from under than from over-inflation. The supposition that the heating of the air in a tire by the sun or pavement in hot weather brings about a dangerous pressure has been exploded by a practical test, and it has been shown that for a motorist to lower his air pressure because the sun is hot, actually injures the tire far more than any possible increase of pressure could. The reason for this is that he heats caused by the flexing of an under-inflated tire destroys the tire much more rapidly than the average motorist realizes.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D.

Do you belong to the army of the Eleventh Hour? Do you pant through the station gates a moment before the train leaves? Keep your engagements and transact your business with the lash of Father Time snapping behind you? If you do, perhaps you pride yourself on belonging to the Eleventh Hour brigade and talk knowingly of how much better you work "under pressure." Don't be deceived.

You are perfectly aware that the chauffeur who runs his car at break-neck speed, slams on the brake when he wants to stop and who always takes the hills on high gear, "just to show what the engine can do," has little consideration for the continued efficiency of his machine. The finest motor ever built is but a fraction as complicated as the human engine.

So it behooves everyone to bear in mind that the wear and tear of working under strain and continually driving business on high gear, cannot be continued without risk.

Fortunately employers and employees are coming to realize that a certain degree of relaxation increases efficiency. However, there are thousands of business men who drive themselves relentlessly with an indifference which they would never permit an employee to display in handling the least costly equipment. The nerve force that proves so successful as a motive power, when exhausted results in complete breakdown.

A reasonable degree of deliberation and the exercise of forethought may save you much mental and physical strain without the least impairment of efficiency.

The Queen Washer

Many Useful Qualities

HANDINESS—This is another important feature. The total weight is only 40 pounds. The heaviest part weighs only 20 pounds.

The lid can be removed in an instant, so can also the legs, which makes it very easy to handle. It takes no more storage room than an ordinary tub.

EASE—There are no cog wheels and therefore no rattling, no lost motion, no waste of power, no friction. This makes the Queen not only remarkably easy to operate, but

ABSOLUTELY NOISELESS

CHEAPNESS—The article that has the greatest merit, which gives the most effective service and lasts the longest, is always the cheapest, even if first cost is a trifle above the ordinary.

However, the Queen costs no more than others and even less than some. It is, therefore, by far the cheapest.
